Miami-based Haber Law set up shop in two new cities in South Florida to expand its reach and respond to client demand in its specialty practice areas.

The new offices are in West Palm Beach, which opened Wednesday, as well as Fort Lauderdale, which is scheduled to open Monday, June 3. In addition to creating the new offices, the firm hired construction attorney Daniel Levin from Cole Scott & Kissane PA who will lead the West Palm Beach shop.

"I am honored to join Haber Law and excited to lead our new office in West Palm Beach," Levin said in a statement. "We are eager to support the growing demand for legal services in the areas of construction, real estate, condominium and commercial business litigation in West Palm Beach and neighboring counties and, in conjunction with each of the firm's offices, to provide quality legal services to our clients."

Haber Law tapped existing senior partners Marnie Dale Ragan and Darrin Gursky to lead its Fort Lauderdale location.

"The firm already services many clients in Broward County but having an office in downtown Ft. Lauderdale solidifies our commitment to the Broward County community and shows our interest in expanding our legal services to clients in this important and vibrant area of South Florida," said firm founder and managing partner David Haber, in a statement.

Haber Law has almost 40 attorneys and specializes in complex business litigation, construction law, condominium associations and homeowners associations law, real estate and transactional law.

The move to both Broward and Palm Beach is also a benefit to many Haber Law employees who live in the northern communities around Miami, the firm said.

"Given the transportation and traffic challenges we all face in South Florida, this is a tremendous benefit to employees, as is the flexible work from home schedules that Haber Law offers employees," the firm said in its announcement.

Levin is board certified by the Florida Bar in construction law. He has 14 years as a construction attorney under his belt that includes jury trial experience.

In his practice, Levin handles construction litigation, construction contracts and general civil litigation. His clients include owners, sureties, contractors, developers and design professionals who need help with contract negotiations or construction disputes, the firm said.

"We are pleased to have Daniel Levin join our team and welcome his leadership as we tap into the West Palm Beach market," Haber said. "Dan's expertise and trial experience, as well as his dedication to client success, align perfectly with our firm's values. With the growth in West Palm Beach in the sectors of real estate and construction, we are looking forward to providing excellent legal services in that market."

Levin spent more than 13 years with Cole Scott after graduating from St. Thomas University School of Law and earning a bachelor's degree from the University of Maryland, according to his LinkedIn profile.

A representative of the firm wasn't immediately available for an interview Thursday.

Haber Law has been on a major growth trajectory in recent years. Most recently, the firm announced in December that it brought on the entire seven-attorney team from boutique Gursky Ragan PA, which specializes in construction and condominium law.
